

Abstract

An electric cooker includes an upper cover, an inner container, a heater, a heat insulator and a temperature control system. It is characterized in that the distance between the heater and the inner container is larger than zero, a radiant chamber is comprised of the inner container and the heat insulator, the heater is installed in the radiant chamber, and the detector of the temperature control system is in the upper cover.